MONDAY EVENING, MARCH 14.

METAPHORICAL. - Last week a congregation in San Francisco were signing.
"Rock of ages, cleft for me," and as they were about to complete the petition,

"Let me hide myself in thee," the strata underneath began to heave and rock, as if there were a prospect of the immediate realization of the devout wish. Pastor and congregation rushed with a devout impulse toward the door, and evinced in the most unmis takable manner that their desire to have the rock of San Francisco cleft for their special concealment was entirely a figurative and metaphorical impulse, wholly consistent with a decided preference on their part, with the most intense preference for above ground and open air. Dr. Watts evidently needs some revision before he can be sung in California with safety.

Horses will do all the mowing and reaping on a farm, thrash the grain, pitch the hay, turn the grindstone, saw the wood, and perform almost all the heavy labor that farmers have been accustomed to do, and growfat, if they are not worried and jerked and kicked about as if they were a living football .- New York

While the steamer Golden City was recently en route from San Francisco to Panama, a woman's stateroom was forced open one night by a man. The woman screamed and raised the to officers and lights, when the intruder was found be her own husband, with whom she had trouble, and from whom she was fleeing to the East.
